DETAILED ACTION

Applicants' arguments; filed 10/29/03, 2/17/04, and 6/3/04; have been fully considered but they are not deemed to be persuasive. Rejections and/or objections not reiterated from previous office actions are hereby withdrawn. The following rejections and/or objections are either reiterated or newly applied. They constitute the complete set presently being applied to the instant application.

LACK OF UTILITY

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1, 3-10, and 15-32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention lacks patentable utility.

This rejection is maintained and reiterated from the previous office action, mailed 6/26/03. Applicants argue that the instantly claimed polymorphic segment sequences at least are usable in forensic analysis by the FBI. This is an allegation without factual support as applicants have not provided any reasoning or evidence such that polymorphism containing sequences as instantly claimed would be expected to be of the type that is usable for such identification and thus no substantial utility has been set forth. Also, such generic identification usage lacks specificity as to identifying any specific individual. Applicants also argue that 100's or 1000's of mitochondria are present in diploid cells but this lacks support for any specific or substantial utility for the instant invention as such multiplicity of mitochondria would be expected to make identification easier of polymorphisms but with no indication that even if detected, that the instant polymorphic segments would be useful for identification. Applicants further argue that seven laboratories are conducting forensic mitochondrial testing with twelve people employed therein. In response no relationship between the instant invention and such testing has been set forth and thus lacking in supporting patentable utility.

Applicants also argue that a utility does not have to be unique. This is acknowledged, however, this does not overcome this rejection because this argument lacks support for the instant invention having specific or substantial utility itself. Applicants then argue that the forensic usage of mitochondrial polymorphisms is credible. This is acknowledged, however, the utility requirement requires that the utility be either credible, specific, and substantial, or, alternatively, well established for the instant invention. Thus, even if a utility is credible, it must be also specific and substantial to meet the credible, specific, and substantial utility requirement. Thus, again the instant invention lacks specific and substantial utility.

LACK OF ENABLEMENT

Claims 1, 3-10, and 15-32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

This rejection is maintained and reiterated from the previous office action, mailed 6/26/03, and not argued by applicants other than regarding the above utility issues.

No claim is allowed.

In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
